

About Me and the Secrets I Don't Want to Keep Anymore

By Puspa Raj Ojha:

My name is Puspa Raj Ojha. I am 17 years old and currently studying in Grade 11 at Global School of Science, Mid-Baneshwor, Kathmandu. I come from Aadarsha Rural Municipality-4, Hinnekada, Doti, but now I live in Kalanki-4, Kathmandu. I'm also learning data science at Broadway Infosys, Tinkune.

I have a strong interest in IT-related courses and programs. I especially like learning new things and exploring how technology can solve real-world problems. In my free time, I love playing volleyball. It keeps me active and helps me stay balanced between study and hobbies.

Now coming to the main part—some secrets that I don't want to keep anymore.

The first one is about my dream. I've always kept it to myself, but I think it's time to share it. I want to become an engineer. This idea came to my mind after seeing the pollution in cities like Kathmandu, mostly caused by vehicles. At the same time, I've also noticed how many people in our country don't have jobs, especially young people. That really made me think.

So my dream is to open my own company in the future that will make pollution-free vehicles and instruments. But not just that—I also want to provide job opportunities through this company. I want to do something that helps both the environment and the people of Nepal. It's something I feel deeply about, even if I haven't shared it much before.

Another secret is my self-doubt. Sometimes I feel like I'm not good enough, especially when studying difficult subjects like data science. I feel pressure to do well, and I get afraid of failure. But I always try to remind myself that it's okay to struggle. What matters is that I don't give up. I just keep going, step by step.

Also, when I first moved from Doti to Kathmandu, it was really hard for me. Everything felt new—the way people talked, the busy streets, even the school system. I didn't tell anyone, but I felt out of place for a while. I missed home. But over time, I learned how to adjust, and now I feel more confident. That experience made me stronger.

So these are some things I've been keeping inside, but I'm ready to let them out now. I believe opening up is also a part of growing. These dreams, doubts, and experiences are all part of who I am, and I'm proud of that.
